

Faculty, Community Educators & Friends of Women's Studies

You are cordially invited to attend the

Girls Write Now* Writing Workshop Monday, February 23rd, 3:00 – 5:30 pm, Portsmouth/Virginia Beach Rooms, ODU Webb Center RSVP requested by February 16th

Sponsored by the Women's Studies Department and the English Department at Old Dominion University, Friends of Women's Studies, and Girls Write Now.

- Learn how to help young women develop their written voice
- Experience a hands-on memoir workshop with professional writers
- Identify key steps in building a writing and mentoring community
- Learn the core elements of a mentoring relationship

New York Times, 2008

Girls Write Now is New York's premier writing and mentoring organization matching creative teenage girls with professional women writers, through weekly one-on-one sessions and group workshops. Young women are encouraged to develop their independent voices and explore careers in professional writing. Maya Nussbaum, Co-Founder and Executive Director will present the workshop, along with veteran mentors Michele Thomas and Susanna Horng, and fourth year mentee Samantha White.

Please contact the Women's Studies Department at 757-683-3823 or kpim@odu.edu to reserve your place at the Workshop.

Additionally, we hope you will plan to attend the annual Friends of Women's Studies Dinner, Tuesday, February 24. For more information and an invitation, visit the website at http://al.odu.edu/womens_studies/ and click on "News & Events."